Product short description:

This chrome-plated brass bow fairlead guides a light mooring line or anchor rode at the bow of a small boat. Its two raised guides accommodate a rope or small-gauge chain, limiting sideways movement when the lead angle changes.

Its shaped base is secured to the deck near the bow with two screws. Installation must follow the direction of the line and provide sufficient clearance to prevent jamming and reduce chafing.

The bright chrome-plated finish complements silver-toned deck hardware and does not require the regular polishing of bare brass. This model is particularly suited to small classic boats where maintaining a consistent appearance throughout the bow fittings is important.

    - This chrome-plated brass bow fairlead is also available in polished brass.
- 3. Is this fairlead available in other sizes?
    - This fairlead is not available in other sizes and cannot be made to measure.

Good to know

This bow fairlead is carefully manufactured using traditional methods, which may result in slight variations in appearance between individual pieces. These characteristics give each fitting its own distinctive character and authenticity.

Made from solid brass with a bright chrome-plated finish, this fairlead combines the strength of brass with the protection provided by chrome plating. Unlike unlacquered polished brass, the chrome-plated surface limits oxidation and helps preserve its original shine over time.

To maintain its finish, regular rinsing with fresh water and cleaning with a soft cloth are generally sufficient. Abrasive products should be avoided to prevent damage to the chrome plating.
